The "Back Bay" silk stockings of ward 11 saved Boston for the President, his ajority in that ward being 832, which is larger than his majority in the city.

Despite the strenuous campaign waged by the two Republican candidates for the Presidential nomination and the fact that Massachusetts had been looked upon as a pivotal State in this contest the voting was light. The Republicans polled a much heavier vote in Boston than the Democrats, but the full strength was not

In many cases Democrata of Boston who desired to show their sympathy with Roosevelt are said to have taken their salmon colored ballots and put them in the ballot box unmarked, because they could not, under the enrolment feature of the primary law, vote for their favorite. Quite a number of citizens who were not enrolled appeared at the booths this morning and the large majority of them asked for Republican ballots, thereby enrolling themselves in that party

There appears to have been considerable inconsistent voting. The returns from West Tisbury, the first town to be heard from, gave La Follette one vote, Roosevelt six and Taft seven. Queerly enough, however, on the vote for delegates at large Charles S. Baxter of Medford, who headed the Roosevelt slate, had seven votes and Crane six, exactly the reverse of the preferential vote. West Tisbury Democrats were a minus quantity to-day. No candidate for delegate at large or district delegate received a vote and no one marked Clark or Wilson as his preference.

Roosevelt led Taft 29 votes on the preference vote in Orleans, the second own to report.

Tisbury, in the Thirteenth district, the third town to report, proved to be Roosevelt territory. For delegates at large Baxter (Roosevelt) had 49 while Crane (Taft) had 23. La Follette had

In East Boston one Republican who is a strong Roosevelt man said he expressed his preference for Roosevelt and voted for seven of his delegates but gave ex-Gov. John L. Bates—a pledged Taft candidate—a vote because he was a fellow townsman.

There were many other instances of There were many other instances of this rather inconsistent voting shown by the declarations of the men who had votes in such odd ways and boasted of it. In many instances men finding that they were enrolled so that they could not vote to express their choice in this election, declined to vote at all, while others took their party ballot and deposited it blank. So little interest was shown in some of the polling places here that not only were the usual workers about the polls missing but in a few instances even the customary checkers at the boath doors customary checkers at the booth doors ere absent. George Fred Williams, the Clark rooter, who declined to be on the slate of delegates at large selected by the Democratic State Committee, was overwhelmingly defeated.

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald received upward of 2,000 votes for the Democratic nomination for Vice-President.

WHAT HAPPENED

We want to take you on a five months' trip in two min-utes. We will not bother you with the details of the jour-ney, but confine our observa-tions to the points of especial five months ago we commenced work on the erection of the new Extension to the Hudson Terminal Buildings, which, in a word, meant not only constructing the building itself, but literally tying it up to its neighbor by knockind a hole into the adjoining walls at every floor, and conducting this invasion without any inconvenience to the tenants of the old building.

In addition, the obstacles that attended the operation were the rigors of a severe Winter, and some ninety odd changes to suit tenants, all of which increased our difficulties enormously and seemed to justify the predictions of our competitors that we had assumed a task impossible of performance in the limited time available. What actually happened, however, is, that we did one of the quickest jobs in the history of building construction, which may be briefly recited as follows:

January 1st - First steel column crected. April 15th - First floor ready for occupancy. April 29th Building accepted by Owners.

"Upon the completion of the building which you have built as an addition to the Hudson Terminal Buildings, it gives me much pleasure to make this expression of our hearty satisfaction with the work as finished and our appreciation of the difficulties which you successfully surmounted in completing so large a building in the very short time within which you accomplished it. Notwithstanding the speed of the erection the work is admirable in every respect and was completed in advance of the time set by you at the beginning of the work. Where conclusions are obvious it is folly to make them!

the as possible Vincent Astor made no effort to see the body of his father. He remained in his car and did not visit either the dock or the big temporary morgue. Capt. Richard Roberts of the Astor eacht took charge of the Astor remains > anxious to get the body away from Halifax to-night. All of the effects of Col. Astor's body were turned over to Biddle in the rude canvas sack in which they had beer placed when removed. Capt. Roberts said that in the sack was about $2,500 in cash which Col. Astor had carried. NOT MR. WIDENER.

His Valet. HALIFAX. April 30 .- It was pretty definitely established to-day that the body buried at sea and supposed to have been that of George D. Widener was that of Edward Keating, Mr. Widener's valet. Capt. Lardner of the Mackay-Bennett in explaining the confusion, said: "We thought it was Mr. Widener at first because the clothing had letters addressed to Mr. Widener, but some of the clothing was not such as would be worn by a firstclass passenger. His overcoat bore the initials E. K."

Mr. Widener's son, after examining the envelope containing the possessions found on the body, said he was certain that the body was that of Edward Keating, his father's valet.

WILL OF TITANIC VICTIM

Filed by His Wife, Who Was Rescued From the Steamship. The will of Martin Rothschild of 753 West End avenue, who was lost on the Titanic, while his wife, Lizzie B. Rothschild, was saved, was filed for probate yesterday by Mrs. Rothschild, who receives all her husband's property, amounting to over $20,000.

In an affidavit Mrs. Rothschild said that her husband placed her in a lifeboa, and that she saw him standing on deck when the boat was lowered away. Later she saw the Titanic sink. Her husband wasn't among the survivors on the Carpathia, and for that reason she believes that her husband is dead. Mrs. Rothschild also said that there were only four persons in the lifeboat she was on and they were all women

BODIES SWEPT AWAY.

Blown Into Gulf Stream, Captain of Minia Believes.

That the bodies of the remaining victims of the Titanic have been carried far to the eastward and are probably beyond reach of the recovery ship Minia was stated in a wireless received yesterday by the White Star line from Capt. Mitchell.

The message said: "If bodies affoat, believe late north gales swept them into Gulf Stream and carried many miles east. Have searched carried many miles east. Have searched long, 48,20 between lat, 41,20 and $4,50 and recovered only one body, making total fourteen. Two being unknown were buried. Believe those on loard mostly members crew. Last two Howell, steward, and L. Cartwright. Also one man underclothing marked H. B. 145, apparently steward."
